

The Shamrock, Rose and Thistle.

By Paul S. B. Jaques.

Chapter 2.

THE SHAMROCK.

Barney Margee was met at Castle Garden, N. Y., by Mike O'Neill and such a hearty greeting is not often seen. Arrangements were made by those true born Irishmen to go out West in quest of the shining gold that was the rage about that time. Their thoughts were now centered on the Golden Gate and dear old Ireland, and Barney penned the following lines to the folks at home:

"Miss Kittie Mahoon,
Kilkenny, Ireland.

Kittie, me darlint, it's meself that's in New York wid the world all round me an' the sea beyond. Faith, an' I'll be afther goin' West wid Mike O'Neill, so don't be afther writin' to me now till I'm tellin' yez where I'm gone at all, at all. Sure, an' it's meself that's kapin' the sprig o' Shamrock in me howly Bible an' I'll be afther wearin' it till I'm comin' back to Kilkenny me darlint. Mike is afther sendin' his love wid me to every broth o' a boy in old Ireland. Goodbye for meself an' Mike O'Neill an' may the howly Mother keep ye, me darlint, till I'm afther sendin' ye again to tell ye where I'm gone.

From

BARNEY MARGE.

March 17th—St. Patrick's day, as it is called—is to every true born Irishman what the 4th of July is to every loyal citizen of America—a National holiday. Legend has it that St. Patrick plucked a sprig of Shamrock or white clover and that he illustrated it as representing the doctrine of trinity and thus it became the national emblem of Ireland. In connection with this event Shamrock is very much in evidence on St. Patrick's day, as are the stars and stripes on declaration day. Much has been said and written about the "wearin' o' the green." This brings us to the day that Barney Margee's letter reached Kilkenny. All were dressed in their Sunday best to dance on the village green. Kittie Mahoon read aloud to those who wished to listen to the news from across the sea. A shout went up for Barney Margee and Mike O'Neill.

"Sure an' he's a broth o' a boy an' by St. Patrick we'll be afther takin' a drop o' the dear Criter for the boys o' Kilkenny that's afther lavin' us at all, at all."

Hats went high in the air and handkerchiefs waved; the old folks looked wise as they refilled their pipes and puffed away in token of the pleasure the news had afforded them.

THE ROSE.

The Christmas holidays had passed, but no tidings had reached Miss Wanner of her absent lover. She could not imagine what was the cause of his prolonged silence. Her own heart told her that Roland Thompson was still true to her, but the suspense during those long, dreary months began to weigh heavily on her mind. She had determined from the first that not even her parents should know the secret of her anxiety, and of course this unwise action had made it doubly hard to bear. The old adage, "darkest hour before dawn," proved true in this instance. As her hopes began to fade, the long looked for letter had come and it was evident that it had travelled thousands of miles out of its proper course. It had been posted at Wellington, New Zealand, but the envelope was literally covered with foreign postmarks. With a sigh of relief Edith sought a secluded spot where she could read the love message unobserved, and the result was that the world appeared brighter than ever. Had she really doubted his fidelity? No, but she resolved to write and tell him of her anxious fears.

Roland Thompson had enjoyed his trip to New Zealand very much judging by the letter he wrote to Edith. It had afforded him an opportunity to visit many places of interest. Going from Frankton in February, which was summer time there, he went to Waimanger and Rotorua. The latter is called "the Wonderland of New Zealand." There nature has placed some of her strange freaks such as boiling springs, steam blow holes, geysers and a hot water lake. The Hamnana cold water spring pours forth over twenty million gallons of water a day. If you toss a penny in it will whirl around but it cannot sink and finally comes back to the side of the spring. There are good sized trout there in abundance. Lake Rotomahana is one of the wonders of the world with its boiling spring in one part and cold water in another just a short distance away. The natives have a show place at Likietue which is dangerous to visit without a guide. It is called "The Brink of Hell" on account of the ground being a crust of sulphur silica that throbs like a motor engine. There are also blue and green lakes not more than a hundred yards apart. The scene was described by Kipling as "the Loneliest; the Loveliest and the Last."

THE THISTLE.

Regimental headquarters presented an animated scene for a few days while preparations were being hurriedly made for the departure of the Scotch Grays, as they were locally called, but better known in after years as the Light Brigade or Noble Six Hundred. Thousands of people had assembled to witness their departure for Nottingham, England. When at length the gates swung open they were noble and grand as they marched away to the old familiar tune, "The Girl I Left Behind Me." Well and truly has Alfred Tennyson pictured them in his immortal poem "The Charge of the Light Brigade." That war should ever claim as its victims such noble specimens of manhood is revolting to our moral sense of right, to say nothing of the religious sentiment of a civilized world. A finer troop of soldiers never formed into line, nor a more reckless waste of human life has never been recorded. The facts here pictured should be held up to the representatives of the international peace conference. This should act as an incentive for all disputes to be settled by arbitration.

Bonny Scotland contributed her quota of brave men to the English army and we may consider the effect this might have upon her loyal daughters. Our Highland Mary naturally felt somewhat lonely after Robert had left her so abruptly, but she did not sit and grieve and pine away. On the contrary, she sought to comfort the fond parents who were well advanced in years and who feared they might be bereft of their only surviving son.

Ireland had given to England a Wellington and Scotland had given her a Gray. The news of their bonny laddie sailing away from old England bound for the Crimea was sufficient cause for grave fears and much anxiety on the part of the many friends left at home to ponder over events as they transpired in the Baltic sea during the years 1853-4. All nations were eagerly watching the events and there are many still living who can testify to the intense excitement caused by the rumors that were constantly circulated concerning the success of the English army.

Our readers may imagine that they know the sequel of this story but they may be wide of the mark in their guessing.

Dysentery is a dangerous disease but can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been successfully used in nine epidemics of dysentery. It has never been known to fail. It is equally valuable for children and adults, and when reduced with water and sweetened, it is pleasant to take.

Hints For The Bedroom.

In this bustling world of ours there is no more delightful and no more important time than the rest hours. Relaxation has become so vital a part of woman's life that negligee apparel is today a necessity of the wardrobe. Perhaps the most needed is the kimono of light silk or other washable material, or the Mandarin coat of silk delicate in color and elaborately embroidered. This is completed by a "matinee" petticoat. To conceal curl papers at night, a broad satin ribbon is tied snugly about the head, while for breakfast the "mob cap" is admirable and is vastly becoming.

NEW IDEA WOMAN'S MAGAZINE.

When the digestion is all right, the action of the bowels regular, there is a natural craving and relish for food. When this is lacking you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They strengthen the digestive organs, improve the appetite and regulate the bowels.
